2. AIMS OF THE PROGRAMME

The programme aims to:

01.	Encourage study and reflection in missiology and cognate areas in relation to contemporary theology and culture
02.	Enhance the development of students as scholars of and practitioners in mission
03.	Generate new theoretical perspectives, deeper theological understanding and a richer set of professional practices which can contribute to, and help to define, missiology

Rationale for the Programme

For well over a decade, Cliff College has been a leading institution in the development of postgraduate programmes in missiology, evangelism, Pioneer ministries and church leadership. Our programme in Leadership, Mission and Ministry, for example, grew out of the charismatic Evangelical renewal movements of the 1980s and 1990s, and continues to support and develop best practices in those traditions. Our programme in Mission and Evangelism arose amidst a renewed emphasis on evangelism in the 1990s and the need for transitioning churches into more 'mission-minded' communities of faith. The Pioneer Ministries FX programme was developed in the mid-2000s deriving from fresh conversations relating to emerging forms of mission and ecclesiology in a postmodern context.

Given the desire to address a number of new areas from this missiological perspective, including religious pluralism, Celtic mission, and Wesleyan theology and spirituality, a new approach was considered appropriate. Rather than a multiplication of MA programmes, it was helpful to create one MA in Mission with a number of distinct but related pathways. This was in accordance with suggestions generated from the University of Manchester and was taken primarily to give concrete expression to the integration of missiological insights across a small number of inter-related areas.

The unity of the current programme coheres with the discipline of missiology as the lens through which these designated areas are critically engaged. The unity of the programme is further demonstrated by all students following the same unit in research and study skills delivered online prior to enrolment, as well as individual sessions at each teaching week. This is further supplemented by the Dissertation research conference held in May annually, which is attended by all students, with parallel sessions available for those at different stages of the programme.

The discipline of missiology provides the framework for considering how the various themes within the programme may become mutually interdependent, whether themes of leadership, Pioneer ministries, discipleship, or evangelism. Additionally, as a college with a rich Wesleyan heritage, the tradition of Wesleyan theology and spirituality can provide resources for a theological paradigm for mission, whilst avoiding a narrow confessional approach. Distinct mission to and with young people and children in contemporary society is part of this missional understanding and Christian mentoring relates closely to aspects of Christian leadership and the Wesleyan tradition. Pathways in Rural Mission, Global Justice, Disability Theology and Third Age Mission further complement the contextual approach and a pathway in Biblical Theology provides a more solid textual foundation to the discipline. This MA programme brings a missiological perspective to a number of cognate areas, and places Cliff College at the forefront of missional thinking, internationally.

Many of these programme changes in recent years reflect our desire as a college to respond positively to student requests and enhance their postgraduate student experience with us. Drawing upon faculty expertise and visiting specialists, the available options also aim to reflect cutting edge trends in the marketplace.

The MA in Mission remains consistent with the University's vision of being celebrated for 'the excellence and breadth of our research, particularly its interdisciplinarity'. This programme helps to pioneer best practices in ministry and rigorous theological reflection in the field. Research projects and dissertations produced as a part of this programme generate a body of critical knowledge and professional skills which have the potential to shape the future of the church in this new missionary context. This work is complemented by students already doing research degrees on related topics. Insofar as the MA in Mission programme is an attempt to learn from a number of areas in order to address our contemporary culture with the gospel, it is deeply concerned with the 'enrichment of social and cultural life' in local communities and around the world.

The MA in Mission is also consistent with the University's goals of 'outstanding teaching and learning', and 'widening participation'. The faculty at Cliff College, and others that form the teaching team, are already persons of international standing in the fields of missiology and cognate areas, as both scholars and practitioners. The vibrant array of missional research projects undertaken at Cliff continues to aid Pioneer ministries in a variety of contexts, and exemplify our commitment to teaching which is continually informed by and influential upon concrete practice.

3. INTENDED LEARNING OUTCOMES OF THE PROGRAMME

A. Knowledge & Understanding
Students should be able to:
A1.	conduct research, as a reflective practitioner, and communicate these findings to specialists in missiology and cognate areas and to interested lay persons
A2.	utilise the skills associated with cultural exegesis and analysis in order to understand fully the conditions of contemporary culture, in both its 'dominant' features and local differences, as the context for mission
A3.	maintain the connection between rigorous theological reflection and a concern for best practice in mission through the methods of 'multiple listening' to scriptural witness, church tradition, contemporary culture and practical experience etc.
A4.	identify and address the challenges facing mission and cognate areas, and the development of new approaches to engaging in mission
A5.	demonstrate the qualities and transferable skills necessary for mission leadership in the context of their own ecclesial tradition/denomination

- access to postgraduate seminars and conferences

dissertation.

C. Practical Skills

Students should be able to:

- C1. Analyse and evaluate historic and contemporary strategies of mission and appropriate them critically as resources for the practice of mission
- C2. contribute a deeper understanding of, and new creative practices for engaging in cross-cultural, contextual, and incarnational ministry today
- C3. draw upon and develop new skills for addressing the theological challenges to mission and cognate areas in an increasingly pluralistic and post-Christian society
- C4. create new practices for proclaiming the gospel under the scientific, economic and technological conditions of contemporary western society
- C5. assess how complex issues and problems in missiology and cognate areas can be analysed and addressed through good research practice

Learning & Teaching Processes

C 1-5 are acquired through

- exploration of shared experience and good practice
- observation of other practitioners
- peer support
- reflection upon the student's practice and experience of mission
- individual and group tutorials
- participation in lectures and seminars held during the residential periods
- directed reading
- independent study
- access to postgraduate seminars and conferences

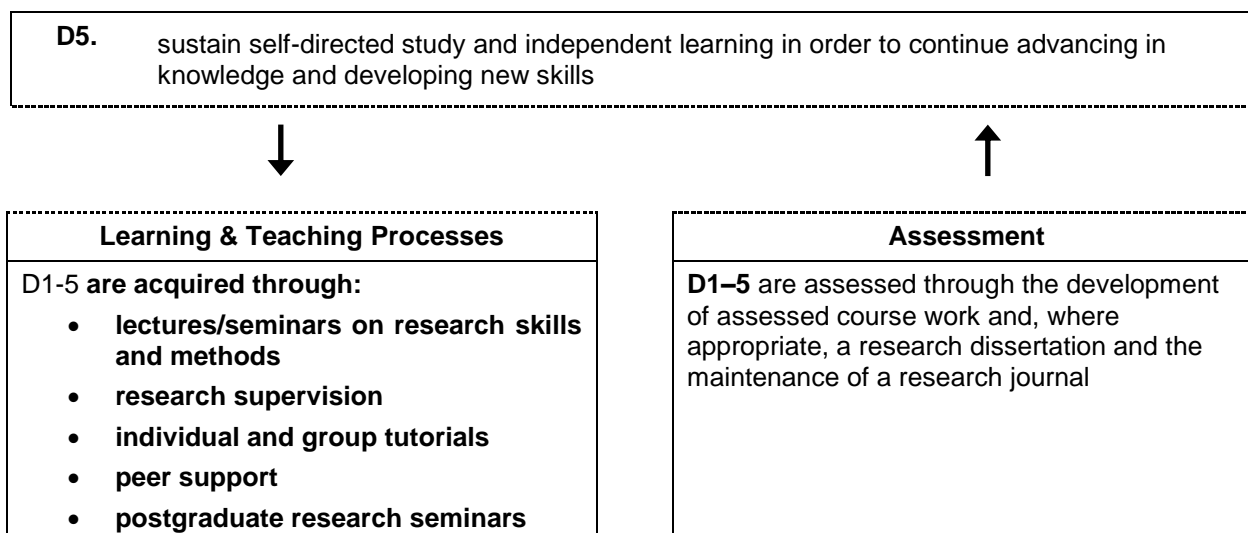

Assessment

C1-5 are normally assessed through four pieces of course work (6,000 words each) or three such pieces and a piece equivalent to 6,000 words which may include an online peer exercise and a placement/Pioneer project and, where appropriate, a research dissertation on a topic related to the programme chosen by the student. Students must submit a detailed log of supervision and research for their dissertation.

D. Transferable Skills and Personal Qualities

Students should be able to:

- D1. develop the conceptual understanding necessary to evaluate critically the current scholarship and methodologies relevant to mission and cognate areas
- D2. cultivate good research skills and habits in preparation for further academic or professional study
- D3. identify and order good research questions in the theology and practice of mission
- D4. demonstrate how research leads to critical arguments and sound judgements which can be clearly communicated to others

4. THE STRUCTURE OF THE PROGRAMME

Students must take four units to a total of 120 credits AND the Masters Dissertation unit to a total of 180 credits

Students will normally follow one of these study patterns:

Full-time students (one year)

Semester one: two units

Semester two: two units

June – August: Dissertation

Part-time students (two years)

Year one: two-three units

Year two: one-two units

March – August of year two: Dissertation

Part-time students (three years)

Year one: two units

Year two: two units

Year three: dissertation

It is important that those who are studying part-time progress at a consistent rate throughout the course. For example, if the required 120 credits of taught modules are completed over the course of two years, it is normally expected that the dissertation worth 60 credits will be completed in one further year at most. In unusual circumstances, students can study the programme over a longer period of time up to a maximum of five years. This requires the explicit permission of the Programme Lead and Academic Director and the Examination Board.

The designations show where a unit is core for a particular named Pathway. Where two core units are required, they enable a student to fulfil the intended learning outcomes for the pathway. Where two units are required to be chosen from a selection of three core units, any combination from the three available core units will be sufficient to enable a student to fulfil the intended learning outcomes for the pathway.

5. STUDENT INDUCTION, SUPPORT AND DEVELOPMENT (in order to deliver the intended learning outcomes, including dissertation support and guidance)

The Programme is advertised through a number of key periodicals, the College's website (www.cliffcollege.ac.uk), and other forms of publicity, especially through personal recommendation. Enquiries are received by a dedicated Administrator and prospective students are invited to submit an application form before an informal interview in order to determine the appropriate programme and course. Successful applicants are offered a place on the programme. Students who accept the offer to take up a place on the programme are sent information in advance of the programme start date about the College, the programme and the arrangements for the induction week. Students will receive an orientation to postgraduate studies at the College during the beginning of each intensive teaching period in September-November and January-May and will receive a full introduction to student affairs at the College in the induction week of the Autumn semester. Students are directed to the PGT Handbook and Student Guide to Part-Time courses on Moodle. Other non-academic information relating to living in the UK, and the Peak District, is normally given on a much more informal basis and through the College practices of community life and pastoral care.

The programme develops the understanding and skills outlined above. At the start of the programme, students are (re-)introduced to academic study through study skills lectures and through the use of both individual and group tutorials. These tutorials are maintained throughout the programme and are supplemented by research conferences and email/telephone/Skype tutorials with Cliff tutors, through which students explore assignment options, research questions and other issues.

Students receive formative feedback through the tutorial system, where they have the option to share with tutors and with their peers draft outlines of work. This encourages an atmosphere of collegiality which is important for future research opportunities and for ministry situations.

Summative assessment is marked anonymously as per University of Manchester regulations.

Students gain key qualities and transferable skills for future employability and ministry through the study of recent academic work in the field, the presentation of original and insightful material both individually and within a group setting and through the preparation of the student for the application of their academic work to future patterns of ministry. As such, the course offers both the Church and wider society the resource of intellectually trained, research-centred individuals capable of acting as bridges of understanding in a multicultural, multi-ethnic world, who are also able to act as catalysts for the critical evaluation of mission and evangelistic practice and ministry within the Christian Church.

Students who have completed a Level 7 programme will have gained a systematic understanding of knowledge in the relevant fields of study alongside a critical awareness of the current problems and insights in mission and related areas. Students will have gained a comprehensive understanding of research methods through the research skills programme applicable to their own future research programmes and to enable them to evaluate critically other advanced scholarship in these disciplines.

Students will be able to deal with complex issues and communicate their findings to both specialist and non-specialist audiences. Students will have demonstrated independent learning strategies and originality, showing initiative and an ability to continue research and the development of new skills at a high level.

Students who have completed this Level will have the qualities and transferable skills for employment involving the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility; decision-making in complex and unpredictable situations; and the independent strategies needed for continuing professional development.

For admission to MA studies (including PG Dip, PG Cert), candidates must be able to satisfy the general admissions criteria of the University and of the College in at least one of the following ways:

- a) Possess a relevant undergraduate degree at a minimum level of 2:2 (Lower second class) Honours, or equivalent.

OR for non-standard entry:

- b) Prospective students are assessed on a case-by-case basis. They will normally be required to:

- I. Participate in a formal interview.
- II. Provide evidence of theological reading and engagement at postgraduate level.
- III. Demonstrate the ability to develop a critical argument at postgraduate level.

A piece of written work at postgraduate level will be required. Those who satisfy the assessment process but do not have the required background in theological study (for example, a good qualification in another area of study) may be admitted to the Diploma with the possibility of progression to the MA dependent on marks achieved, or may be required to complete additional study prior to admission.

For students whose first language is not English a successful pass at IELTS level 6.5 or equivalent is normally required. The minimum IELTS score in writing must be 6.5 and in all other categories 6.0

Further details are available in the College's Prospectus.
